SCOPE AND CONTENTS NOTE

KOURION (CURIUM), CYPRUS 1935–1954

After digging at Lapithos in 1930-1931, the Penn Museum, under B. H. Hill, resumed excavations in Cyprus in the spring of 1934 at Curium (Kourion), near Episkopi. Hill was assisted by George H. McFadden, a University of Pennsylvania Museum research associate and generous backer of the Cypriot program. The excavations, conducted from 1934-1954 (interrupted by World War II, 1941-1945) revealed an extensive area of settlement containing sites inhabited variously from the Neolithic through Byzantine periods. The main sites were: Sotira (Neolithic) excavated by the University of Pennsylvania Museum and the Cyprus Department of Antiquities (P. Dikaios) in 1951, Bamboula (Late Bronze Age) and Kaloriziki Necropolis (Geometric) excavated by J. F. Daniel in 1937, 1939, and 1948, and Kourion (Classical through Roman) with the extensive Sanctuary of Apollo excavated by G. McFadden. Numerous other individuals participated periodically in the excavations, including Virginia Grace and DeCoursey Fales. When G. McFadden died in 1953, the excavations were near completion, and so after a study season and the settling of administrative matters by G. Roger Edwards for the Museum, the excavations were closed. Research continues today on the Cypriot finds in the University of Pennsylvania Museum, and excavations at the site have been resumed in recent times by other institutions. The Penn Museum archives also house the records of Diana Buitron-Oliver, who excavated at Kourion in the early 1980s.

A large segment of the Kourion records consists of correspondence and reports regarding financial and administrative matters, as well as the progress of the excavations. Correspondents include B. H. Hill, G. H. McFadden, J. F. Daniel, V. Grace, H. H. F. Jayne, M. A. Godfrey, and F. Rainey. Much of the 1953-55 correspondence concerns the settlement of McFadden's affairs, especially in relation to the excavation.

The numerous publications on Cyprus are listed in the May 1978 bibliography, including J. L. Benson's 1972 Museum Monograph, Bamboula at Kourion. See also "Publications of The University Museum—Mediterranean" (1973).
